

❤️ Mediation Test Scenario: "The Weekend Plans Argument"

📋 Scenario Overview

Conflict Type: Quality time, communication assumptions, prioritization

Intensity: Moderate (6-7/10)

Expected Recommendation: Joint mediation or solo conversations (safe to proceed)

Key Dynamics: Pursuit-withdrawal pattern, different needs for connection vs. independence

👤 Partner 1's Intake Responses

The pursuer - feeling deprioritized, anxious about connection

Question 1: What happened from your perspective?

We had plans to spend Saturday together, but when I got home from work Friday, they had already made plans to go out with friends on Saturday afternoon. When I said I thought we were spending the day together, they got defensive and said I never specifically confirmed it. We ended up arguing about how we never spend quality time together anymore and they accused me of being controlling. I feel like I'm always the one trying to make time for us while they prioritize everything else.

Question 2: Intensity rating (1-10)

6/10

Question 3: Has this happened before?

Yes - Few times this year

Question 4: Current emotional state

- ☒ Hurt
- ☒ Frustrated
- ☒ Disappointed
- ☒ Anxious

Question 5: Physical safety concern

☒ Yes, I feel physically safe

Question 6: Emotional safety concern

☐ No, I have some concerns

Question 7: Need immediate break

☐ No

Question 8: Thoughts of ending relationship

☐ No

Question 9: Substance involved

☐ No

Question 10: Urgency to resolve (1-10)

7/10

Question 11: How triggered are you (1-10)

6/10

Question 12: Preferred next step

- ☒ Talk together soon
- ☒ Process alone first

Question 13: What do you need right now

I need to feel like I matter and that our relationship is a priority. I need them to understand that I'm not trying to control their social life - I just want to feel chosen sometimes.

Question 14: Anything else

This keeps happening and I don't know how to talk about it without sounding needy or controlling. I feel like I'm always the one asking for time together.

Partner 2's Intake Responses

The withdrawer - feeling suffocated, defensive about independence

Question 1: What happened from your perspective?

My friend texted me about hanging out Saturday and I said yes because we hadn't made concrete plans. When I mentioned it, they got upset and said we were supposed to spend Saturday together, but we never actually confirmed anything specific. Then they started saying I "never" make time for us and that I care more about my friends, which isn't true. I feel like I can't make any plans without checking in first, like I need permission. I love them but I also need to maintain my friendships and have my own life.

Question 2: Intensity rating (1-10)

5/10

Question 3: Has this happened before?

Yes - Few times this year

Question 4: Current emotional state

- ☒ Frustrated
- ☒ Defensive
- ☒ Guilty
- ☒ Confused

Question 5: Physical safety concern

☒ Yes, I feel physically safe

Question 6: Emotional safety concern

⚠ No, I have some concerns

Question 7: Need immediate break

✗ No

Question 8: Thoughts of ending relationship

✗ No

Question 9: Substance involved

✗ No

Question 10: Urgency to resolve (1-10)

5/10

Question 11: How triggered are you (1-10)

5/10

Question 12: Preferred next step

- ☒ Take a short break
- ☒ Talk together soon

Question 13: What do you need right now

I need them to understand that having friendships doesn't mean I don't love them or value our relationship. I need some freedom to make plans without feeling guilty or like I'm doing something wrong. I also need us to communicate better about expectations.

Question 14: Anything else

I feel like I'm walking on eggshells. I don't want to hurt them but I also don't want to lose myself or my friends. I wish we could find a balance where we both feel good.

Testing Notes

- Expected AI Recommendation: Joint mediation (both feel safe, moderate intensity, willing to talk)
- Key Insights AI Should Identify:
 - Classic pursuit-withdrawal pattern
 - Different attachment needs (connection vs. autonomy)
 - Communication breakdown around expectations
 - Both feel emotionally unsafe (being judged/controlled)
 - No safety red flags - good candidates for mediation
- Personalization Factors:
 - Partner 1: High urgency (7/10) - wants resolution soon
 - Partner 2: Lower urgency (5/10) - needs cooling off
 - Both selected "talk together soon" - alignment
 - Both have emotional safety concerns - need careful facilitation
